New appointments to the Economic Regulation Authority's Consumer Consultative Committee

The Economic Regulation Authority today announced that a new position had been created on its Consumer Consultative Committee (ERACCC) for the Department of Indigenous Affairs.

Ms Mia Kriznic has been appointed to the position.

Also, Mr Andrew Canion has been appointed as the Chamber of Commerce and Industry's representative on the Committee, replacing Ms Jessica Shaw.

The ERACCC plays an important role in helping the information exchange between the Authority and consumers on regulatory issues in the gas, electricity, rail and water industries. More specifically, ERACCC provides:

- a source of advice to the Authority from consumer representatives on its decision-making and policy development on regulatory issues that affect small use consumers;
- a means for the Authority to inform consumer representatives on regulatory issues;
- an opportunity for consumer representatives to present their views on specific issues to the Authority; and
- an avenue for broader consumer consultation on utility regulation issues.

Further information about the work of the ERACCC is available on the Authority's web site.
