Draft Rate of Return Guidelines (2018) for Gas Transmission and Distribution Networks

ERA ESTABLISHES INDEPENDENT PANEL

The Economic Regulation Authority (ERA) is currently undertaking a review of the Gas Rate of Return Guidelines. The guidelines detail the method the ERA uses to estimate the allowed rate of return for gas transmission and distribution service providers.

As part of this process the ERA has appointed an Independent Panel to review the draft guidelines and report on whether they are supported by sound reasoning and are capable of achieving the National Gas Objective.

The Independent Panel process will give the ERA the benefit of an independent review, and provide stakeholders with further confidence that our findings are robust.

The Independent Panel members are:

- Dr John Fallon – Chair
- Dr Raymond da Silva Rosa
- Julie Barrow

Dr Fallon has substantial experience across all aspects of economic regulation and public policy, while Dr da Silva Rosa currently heads the discipline of accounting and finance at the University of Western Australia. Ms Barrow is an experienced financial counsellor and consumer advocate.

The ERA thanks all those who nominated panel members.

Further details are available on the ERA website.
